

Jane Hasell-McCosh

Author

Jane Hasell-McCosh, the founder of the World Marmalade Awards, is the daughter of Rt. Rev. Henry David Halsey the Bishop of Carlisle. Jane's husband's ancestor Elizabeth Rainbow made some of the earliest recorded marmalade at the Bishop's palace, outside Carlisle in the 1660s. When Bishop Rainbow died she moved down to live with her nephew at Dalemain bringing her recipe books with her, and these have been passed down through the centuries. Jane is respected around the world as one of the leading authorities in marmalade making
