

Eleanor Doughty

Eleanor Doughty is a journalist and interviewer. She began her career in journalism at the Daily Telegraph, and specialises in writing about the moneyed and titled classes. Now freelance, her writing appears in the Financial Times, the Spectator, Country Life, The Times and Sunday Times, the Telegraph, and many other publications. When she is not writing, she can be found either on or near a horse.

Her first book, Heirs and Graces, will be published by Penguin Random House. She tweets sporadically @brushingboots.

Agents

Sophie Scard

SScard@unitedagents.co.uk