

Carole Aubrée-Dumont

Author

Carole is a France-born writer who lives in Brighton. Having graduated from the drama school École Florent in Paris, she has spent much of her career working as a voice-over artist. Her time acting and reading scripts in front of a microphone informed her research into the difficult process of learning to speak and finding one's voice. Her memoir-in-progress DUMB is the story of how the diagnosis of her son's speechlessness made her confront the silences in her French family.
