

Oliver Wellington

Writer

Oliver Wellington is an actor and emerging writer from Rochdale, Greater Manchester.

As a writer, Oliver's debut play, "A Lightweight Disposable Product" premiered at the VAULT Festival 2020 in London. The play explores the tumultuous life of punk icon Poly Styrene, the charismatic frontwoman of X-Ray Spex, exploring the experience of a mixed race woman entering the very white and male dominated punk movement.

As an actor, he has appeared in various TV shows award-winning shows such as "Rosie Molloy Gives Up Everything" (SKY/Hartwood Films), the BAFTA-winning "Juice" (BBC3), and "Brassic" (Sky One), among others.

Oliver's writing spotlights diverse narratives, blending humour and drama as he draws from his working-class roots, growing up mixed-race in the North and challenging LGBTQIA+ stereotypes. Crafting stories that resonate deeply with underrepresented communities.

Agents

Georgina Carrigan
gcarrigan@unitedagents.co.uk

Associate Agent
Gemma Bicknell
gbicknell@unitedagents.co.uk

Gemma Bicknell

Credits

Theatre

Production	Company	Notes
A LIGHTWEIGHT DISPOSABLE PRODUCT 2020	VAULT Festival	Based on the life of punk icon 'Poly Styrene'.