

Andrew Cope

Children's Author

Andy is a grown up who still manages to think as a child. He always describes himself as an 'accidental author' who came late to writing (he wrote his first book in 2005 at the grand old age of 37)! The idea for 'Spy Dog' came to him after watching a James Bond film with his family and wondering out loud whether Lara, their pet mutt, could actually be a super-sophisticated secret agent who was just pretending to be 'normal'. The kids laughed at him but he thought it was a really good idea. So he tapped the ideas out on his laptop and read them to his daughter.
